One for the Deil!

About thirty years ago the cause of temperance had but little headway in Scotland, more especially in the rural districts, where excess did not exhibit its frail characteristics so often as witnessed in the large cities and towns. In Muthill, Perthshire, there lived at the period spoken of two individuals, who held opinions of their own upon every public question that transpired. One of them was the Rev. Mr. W—, the parish minister, a portly, good living man, whose voice gave forth no uncertain sound. The other, William S—, was in contrast, base and small, who had, when a student, got cracked upon a point of theology, which, notwithstanding his brilliant scholarship, prevented him from entering the ministry, and was, as years rolled past, called by the familiar name of "Daft Willie." One day the two met, and as Willie was fond of snuff he took out his box to give the minister a pinch. The rev. gentleman then asked Willie what he thought of the temperance agitation. "Weel, minister, what d'ye think o't yersel'?" "What I think of it, Willie, is this—that its the work of the devil!" Willie put his box in his pocket, and slapping his thigh with his hand, said, with glee, "Minister, I never kent o' the deil daein' so much good!"

THE Prince of Wales has invited Count Geza Zichy, the one-armed Hungarian pianist to visit London this season, and he will make his debut at Marlborough House. The Count, who lost his arm through an accident at school, plays with his left hand in a truly marvellous manner. He possesses a considerable fortune, and music is his amusement, so he plays solely for charity. During the last two years he has distributed some £10,000, which he has earned by his performances.
